Text Types and the History of English Manfred Görlach, 2008-08-22 The history of modern European languages has been largely determined by the range of functions they have acquired, particularly after 1500. This development necessitated a notable expansion of their syntax and lexis, but is most characteristically reflected in the conventionalization of text types. Starting from the German concept of Textsorte as developed from the 1960s onwards, the present account is a first comprehensive attempt at charting the field for the history and present-day situation of the English language. In text types, a designation is linked with a more or less stable form which guides the writer's production as well as the reader's expectation, permitting one to recognize straightforward uses as well as deliberate misuses. Some two thousand of such designations are here listed with minimal definitions and dates for first occurrences. The discussion then concentrates on selected types, which are seen as especially illustrative for English: book dedications, cooking recipes, advertisements, church hymns, lexical entries, and jokes. Their functions and development over time are treated in correlation with their specific linguistic characteristics and adaptations to different period styles and social changes in the readership. The functional range of text types in traditions outside England and the consequences of the export of English categories are exemplified by the history of Scots/Scottish English and of English in India. The arguments are accompanied by a lavish supply of textual excerpts and more than fifty pages of facsimiles, which are especially relevant for insights derived from typographical features. A full bibliography and indices are provided at the end. The book will prove useful for decisions on the constitution of representative text corpora and stimulate research into a greater number of individual text types as well as contrastive analyses at least among European languages.

Varieties of English in Writing Raymond Hickey, 2010 This volume is concerned with assessing fictional and non-fictional written texts as linguistic evidence for earlier forms of varieties of English. These range from Scotland to New Zealand, from Canada to South Africa, covering all the major forms of the English language around the world. Central to the volume is the question of how genuine written representations are. Here the emphasis is on the techniques and methodology which can be employed when analysing documents. The vernacular styles found in written documents and the use of these as a window on earlier spoken modes of different varieties represent a focal concern of the book. Studies of language in literature, which were offered in the past, have been revisited and their findings reassessed in the light of recent advances in variationist linguistics.

Vol. 3 develops an approach to text types that is suitable for middle secondary students.

TEACHING ENGLISH IN INDUSTRY 4.0 AND DISRUPTIVE ERA (A PRACTICAL GUIDE TO IMPLEMENTING SMELT I 4.0 DE IN INDONESIAN CLASSROOMS) Didi Suherdi, This book is intended to present this recent development of the 21st century world and the new demands of communication in our today's life. Based on the nature and roles of English in this century communication network, the whole chapters have been designed to answer questions on how English is to be best learned and taught, how English is to be best utilized, and how the English curriculum is to be best oriented. The content of the first three chapters is theoretical and predictive, while that of the rest is empirical explication of SMELT I 4.0 DE (Synergetic Multilayered English Language Teaching in Industry 4.0 and Disruptive Era), the way of teaching suggested as an alternative model of ELT designed to meet the challenges of the 21st century, especially those of the industry 4.0 and disruptive era. Throughout this book, readers will be led to raise their awareness on the need of reconstructing ELT in response to the development of language teaching, information communication technologies, learning autonomy, and positive character that are demanded by today's world life. In addition, based on this awareness, readers are gradually introduced to technical and practical activities of administering the model, from planning, implementing, monitoring, including understanding core competences and basic competences, and formulating learning achievement indicators and teaching objectives; developing teaching and learning media and sources, teaching-learning stages, learning assessment, and follow-up activities.

Genre in the Classroom Ann M. Johns, 2001-11 Presents the major theoretical approaches to genre in applied linguistics, ESL/EFL pedagogies, rhetoric, and composition studies throughout the world; describes how research and pedagogy relate to each of these perspectives; discusses applications.
