My background: College calculus - a general course, not for mathematicians Linear Algebr... What exactly is a differential? - Mathematics Stack Exchange Jul 13, 2015 · The right question is not "What is a differential?" but "How do differentials behave?". Let me explain this by way of an analogy. Suppose I teach you all the rules for adding and multiplying rational numbers. Then you ask me "But what are the rational numbers?" The answer is: They are anything that obeys those rules. Now in order for that to make sense, we have to ...

calculus - What is the practical difference between a differential ... See this answer in Quora: What is the difference between derivative and differential?. In simple words, the rate of change of function is called as a derivative and differential is the actual change of function. We can also define a derivative in terms of differentials as the ratio of differentials of function by the differential of a variable.

calculus - Square of a differential - Mathematics Stack Exchange Nov 29, 2015 · The meaning of the notation is indeed a second order differential, i.e. a difference of difference, not a squared difference. Then about any function will show you that the square of the first derivative isn't the second derivative.

The differential has a linear approximation meaning. Basically, it denotes the change in the function. If it's a scalar value function, the change would be scalar, and thus the differential (would map to a scalar). If the domain is matrices, then the Jacobian is a matrix (a non-linear map from matrices to matrices).
