The varying colors of fall equinox | Geophysical Institute Sep 21, 2023 · These trees are now responding to fewer hours of sunlight by ceasing to flood their leaves with chlorophyll. The sudden lack of that green, energy-converting chemical allows the leaves to show red, orange and yellow pigments that were within the leaves all summer. Northern Tree Habitats | Geophysical Institute Aug 14, 2025 · Why take a chance with exotics, when native trees have proven their ability to survive? Several reasons prompt testing of foreign tree species. Human activities often create and maintain new, sometimes artificial habitats that native trees are not adapted to. Exotics may have strong wood, large fruits or straight boles that are lacking in the ... Southcentral Alaska: a Natural Experiment in Plant Succession Apr 18, 1996 · About 9,100 years ago, white and black spruce trees made it to Southcentral. Ager said the winged seeds of both tree species probably blew down through mountain passes from the unglaciated Interior. Once white and black spruce made it through the Alaska Range, the trees migrated southward at a rate of eight-tenths of a kilometer per year. Mummified forest tells tale of a changing north | Geophysical ... Jan 6, 2011 · Pollen samples from lake-bottom muck also show that basswoods, hickories, elms and other trees grew in Alaska and other northern places millions of years ago. Those fair-weather trees suggest a very warm period in the far north, while the mummified forest of Ellesmere Island suggests a climate in transition from comfortable to bitter cold. Burls - Geophysical Institute Aug 14, 2025 · Burls weaken trees but do not kill them. The weakening effect, however, makes the trees vulnerable to other diseases which can kill them. Relatively little is known about burls, for several reasons: It takes a long time for a burl to grow--nearly as long as the tree on which it is found--so research is stretched out over a long period of time. The Kodiak Treeline | Geophysical Institute Aug 14, 2025 · Spruce trees planted on the islands by the Russians in 1805 are doing just fine and reseeding themselves naturally, although the total tree population hardly amounts to a forest. Witches' Broom | Geophysical Institute Aug 14, 2025 · Witches' broom on spruce trees is caused by a rust disease (a kind of fungus disease). The rust lives on the spruce tree throughout the year. Each spring, small yellow pustules appear on the new needles of the broom. A strong sweet odor, which is easily recognizable, usually accompanies the maturation of these pustules. Feltleaf willows: Alaska's most abundant tree | Geophysical Institute May 25, 2023 · The range of the feltleaf willow, probably the most numerous tree in Alaska. From Alaska Trees and Shrubs by Les Viereck and Elbert L. Little, Jr. Tropical Fossils in Alaska | Geophysical Institute Aug 14, 2025 · Trees of the rain forest tend to have smooth bark, broad evergreen leaves and heavily buttressed roots--all suitable characteristics for a climate where water and sunshine are plentiful all year round. Cottonwood and Balsam Poplar | Geophysical Institute Aug 14, 2025 · The Klukwan giant belies the belief that trees tend to get smaller the farther north one goes. Both balsam poplar and cottonwood have value for fuel wood, pulp and lumber.
